

The Valley Historical Society was founded in 1977 to preserve the history of the Cassadaga Valley area. The museum is located in the village of Sinclairville, which houses artifacts dating back to Indian occupation 10,000 years ago to the settlers of over 200 years ago and recent happenings.

During the period 1809-10, settlers came to the area, over the hill, down Chautauqua Lake from Lake Erie and up the Alleghany tributaries. Wherever there was water power, saw mills were constructed, followed by other pioneer industries.

In 1845 the Museum building in Sinclairville was built as a store for Mr. Mitchell. It has been used as a post office, Catholic Church, the library and lodge rooms.

Exhibits in the Museum reflect early settler life and industries, featuring butter, cheese and maple syrup making. Quilts and clothing, a spinning wheel, swift, loom, farm machinery and tools are on display.

Mr. Mitchell's cider business (later known as Colburn's Cider) is reflected in our big wheel and cider barrels.

The Museum also houses many records from area churches, schools, stores and farms.
